Urban Relation

Interaction: From Construction to Integration

We propose the introduction of the urban and rural sprawl in order to reinforce productive networks and create a system of collaboration to transform the "us" and "them" polarization concept into one that enables sparsely populated zones.

In order to ensure the equal representation of refugees, we propose a progressive and distributed installation of the refugees hosted by the Finnish population. A 10% quota of new arrivals is a correct percentage for an integrated network and that allows to avoid the ghetto neighborhood.

The first temporary where new arrivals can have access to a house will be trained to a new profession allows a close link with the inhabitants during the 6 months registration time.

After this time, the house can stay at the garden, move to another land where refugees can start a more elementary live or reused for other purposes.
